CONGRESS AND THE CURRENCY

The following remarks upon the currency outlook in Congress, which we copy from the Providence Journal, may be supposed to reflect the views of Senator Anthony, one of the most influential opponents of inflation "It is to be regretted that Congress has really made so little progress in settling the currency questions which have been so long under discussion in both Houses. Thus far little if anything has been determined beyond showing that a redistribution of circulation among banks, by taking from some and giving to others, is not likely to prevail. What is to be done about the reserves, what about increasing the volume of currency and to what extent banking is to be made free, are vital questions which remain as unsettled as ever The leaders of legislation in both Houses naturally both feel and express much solicitude at the unfortunate views which still attend all these questions So far as we may judge from the action of the Senate, there is no probability that Mr Sherman's bill for redistributing the bank circulation will pass that body, the bill having by a small majority, on the motion of Mr Morrimon, been recommitted to the Committee on Finance with instructions to report a bill for increasing the currency to $400,000,000 This seems to pledge the same majority to a scheme of positive inflation that may prove to be far more injurious in its effects than the plan of Mr Sherman which has been so strenuously resisted. This action of the Senate has strengthened the hopes of the inflationists in both Houses, and unless they find themselves hopelessly at variance in matters of detail, it now looks as though they would at length be able to carry their views into effect. It appears that they have a majority in the Senate, and they claim to have a large majority in the House It remains to be seen, however, to what extent their plans may be modified by new propositions for free banking, which are sure to be brought forward and to find many supporters

"In this unsettled condition of the currency question, the business interests of the country are very largely involved. They remain unsettled in like manner. It is impossible in the presence of so great uncertainties, to mature any plans for the future. It would have been far better to accept Mr Sherman's bill for a redistribution of the bank circulation, if legislation would have stopped with that, than by rejecting it, to have opened the floodgates of inflation, or to have invited the deluge of rash and dangerous legislation which now threatens the country Even though the circulation had been withdrawn from some of the great commercial centres, and given to the Agricultural States of the West, it would have flowed back to where it was most wanted. The circulation is governed by a law which Congress did not enact, and which Congress can neither repeal nor suspend. Money will go where it is most needed, and nothing can prevent it With inflation or without it, the currency of the country will tend to places where the great transactions of trade go on, and where capital is most engaged in commerce and manufactures.

"The most discouraging fact, however, about the situation, is that it affords no hope that anything will occur is to be done towards the restoration of the currency to a specie basis Free banking would not lead to this result, and inflation would lead in the opposite direction and tend to put off the day of restoration on an indefinite period This may please those who believe that we already have the best currency in the world," but it will disappoint and displease all others. No legislation on this subject can be deemed truly wise which does not assist in preparing the way for the restoration of a specie currency at the earliest possible moment To do anything which retards this result can be nothing but a great calamity to the country

HOPEFUL SIGNS AT THE WEST In the debate, two or three days since, in the United States Senate, Senator Logan of Illinois took a conspicuous part in favor of paper Money and more of it for the West. There was then before the Senate a petition signed by two hundred of the principal merchants of Chicago, men engaged in all branches of business and representing much the larger portion of the active capital of that city, Since these petitions were sent to Washington the Chicago Chamber of Commerce has also declared that the West wants no more paper money and does want specie payments. Yet Senator Logan says a thousand Chicago merchants agree with him. As the banks and bankers, the Chamber of Commerce, which so fully represents the grain trade, and nearly all the rest of the merchants of any standing in Chicago are represented on the first petition we have first mentioned, one is curious to know where Senator Logan finds his thousand merchants on the other side

The Cleveland Leader recently said; "The business men of Cincinnati have done them selves credit by sending to Congress a petition against any action that will have the effect of inflating the currency. This is sound doctrine. The business men of Cincinnati prefer real permanent prosperity to any temporary kite-flying. Now will Chicago second the motion" Chicago has promptly responded.

The District of Columbia investigation still waits for the completion of the compilation of accounts contracts and other papers which the committee has asked from the District Government. This will now be ready in a short time The memorialists have secured five or six able lawyers as counsel, including Mr Shellabarger, of Ohio, and Judge Merrick, of Maryland

The College Courant of New Haven, is to publish the third course of lectures by the Rev Henry Ward Beecher before the Yale Divinity School. The course will be an important one, as Mr. Beecher is this winter to consider the doctrines of the Bible.

LIQUOR STATISTICS. From statistics recently published it is found that the amount of money spent for liquors throughout the United States during the year 1870 was $1,487,000,000. Massachusetts' share of this was directly $27,070 475. New York spent 216,617 520, of nearly ten times as much as Massachusetts. On the other hand the country spent in the same time for flour and meal, cotton goods, boots and shoes, clothing, woolen goods, newspapers and job printing $905,000,000, It was estimated that the amount of liquors consumed was sufficient to fill a canal four feet deep, fourteen feet wide and eighty miles long, and the number who drank the stream dry would, if formed in a procession five abreast, make an army one hundred and thirty miles long.

A correspondent of the Tribune, who has been interviewing Senators on the currency question, gives a detailed report of his work and arrives at the following conclusions:

You will see, from the list which I append, that just now there is a majority of ten or more votes in the Senate for inflation in some form or another, counting as inflationists those who are reported as unsettled in their minds. While the result is one, perhaps, hardly expected by the people, there are virtually no new features to be recorded. The West and South are practically united in its favor, as they have been before, while the East presents a still firmer front in opposition. Both Senators from Texas, both from California, both from Ohio, and perhaps half a dozen from other Western and Southern States, are the only Representatives of those sections who are not in the ranks of the inflationists, while the proportionate representation of inflationists among Senators from Eastern and Middle States is still smaller. In this way the lines are drawn at the present moment. What changes may take place it is, of course, impossible to foresee.

It is somewhat unusual to find a Democratic journal willing to speak so fairly of a temperance movement, as does the Boston Post in an editorial on the prayer crusade, from which we extract the following:

The campaign is announced to begin in Worcester the first of March, when the adaptability of the plan to this section will speedily be demonstrated. The worst that can be said of it is that it leads to extravagant and eccentric manifestations, and possibly to such a result as is seen in the reported insanity of the leader of one of the Ohio praying bands, caused by excitement. These dangers it possesses in common with every extraordinary popular excitement, while its ultimate purpose is so worthy as to command approbation, whatever criticism may be applied to the manner of the work. It is impossible to believe that the spreading enthusiasm of these few weeks can pass away and leave no lasting impression on the public mind. Were it only an evanescent excitement, it would merit only condemnation; but with its promise of permanent good it presents a strong claim to favorable consideration.

CHARLES SHIRLEY BROOKS, the English author, whose death is announced by cable, was born in 1815 He studied for the bar, but having a preference for literature he applied himself to dramatic composition and journalism, and met with success, which decided his future career He produced a series of dramas at the Haymarket, Lyceum and Olympic Theatres, the best of which are "Our New Governess," an amusing two act comedy, 'Honors and Tricks," a three act comedy, "Creole," a drama based on a story of slavery in Mauritius He occupied a seat in the reporters' gallery in the House of Commons for five sessions for the Morning Chronicle He visited Russia, Egypt and Syria for the Chronicle, his letters to which have been reprinted under the title of "The Russias of the South" Mr. Brooks has written several novels, the best known being "Aspin Court," 'Gordian Knot,", the 'Silver Cord," and 'Sooner or Later' He has acquired considerable reputation as a lecturer, and long contributed social and political articles to the London Illustrated News He was for many years one of the most diligent contributors to Punch, and on the death of Mark Lemon in 1870 became the editor of that periodical.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC The liquor traffic has fallen upon troublesome times. What with the praying women at the West, and Gov Dingley hauling the Sheriffs over the coals at the East for not enforcing the laws, with the corporation of Trinity Church, New York, clearing out all liquor sellers from its buildings in that city, and the Methodist Episcopal Church pursuing a similar policy with its property, with the State Constables harassing the dealers in Massachusetts as they have never done before, and with the general awakening interest all over the country in the contest for the suppression of intemperance, it seems as if the traffic must, by all these combined assaults, be driven into closer quarters than ever before. That the contest will be a long and desperate one no person can doubt, and that the cause of temperance will win lasting victories in it only so far as public sentiment is brought to sustain it, is equally clear The most encouraging aspect of the contest at the present time is the fact that whole communities are arraying themselves against the evil, making a public opinion before which the keepers of liquor saloons and groggeries abandon the traffic, and what is equally important, strengthening those who have been the victims of intemperance in their efforts to reform On all these indications the friends of temperance may gather faith to believe that they are to see the great evil against which they war very much circumscribed, and in many places, we hope, entirely abolished —Boston Journal

AN ANTICIPATED VOLCANIC ERUPTION Mount Vesuvius manifests the premonitory symptoms of a fierce eruption The portentous rumblings that have preceded all former great outbursts are distinctly audible, while dense clouds of smoke indicate the proximity of fiery discharges Professor Palmieri, the director of the Observatory erected on the side of Mount Vesuvius, announces that a severe eruption of volcanic matter may be looked for within a short time. The Professor devotes his whole time and attention to the study of volcanic phenomena, and his predictions will, it is hoped, serve as a warning to the villagers whose lives and homes may be endangered by the descent of the molten mass If an eruption should occur, as predicted, the subject will doubtless receive a thorough investigation, and give an opportunity such as has never before been afforded for the study of this natural phenomena.

All work in the ice houses on the Hudson River closed Saturday. The continued thaw had so weakened the ice as to render even foot passage across at any point dangerous Three houses only at Poughkeepsie are full of ice All the rest of the houses along the river are not quite two-thirds full Close sighting shows that up to Saturday night, 750,000 tons of ice had been gathered, and the harvest is considered over Last year 1,500,000 tons were stored

An Indian Prince, the Rao of Cutch, who had for his tutor a distinguished Irish officer, now a lieutenant general, sagaciously observed to him, "Why, in such words as whip, do you write the aspirate after the p, though you sound it before it?"

The Deering heirs have sold Cow Island, Portland harbor, to the United States Government for $10,000, and seventy acres on Great Hog Island to the same for $17,000.

The Press says a man and woman were arrested at the American House, Portland, on Monday, at the instance of parties in Auburn, who alleged that they had decamped They were not man and wife, but another woman's husband and another man's wife.

Little Frank Price, who fell from a tree in Deering last summer and broke his back, is dead. He suffered through nearly five months the most excruciating pain, and at the time of his death large pieces of bone were exposed on account of fearful bed sores. He was fifteen years old.

At the Republican caucus in Saco on Saturday, there was no choice of candidate for Mayor. Judge Tapley received 107 votes, Stephen C. Libby 78, George A. Carter 71.—Another caucus will be held on Tuesday.—Richard H. Nott was nominated for Municipal Judge by a vote of 92, to 75 for George A. Emery.

Mr. Moses F. Sianury of Fairfield claims to have a model rat-trap. One cold morning not long since, the aqueduct that conveys the water from his well to the barnyard was found to be obstructed. An examination disclosed eighteen rats which had sought the shelter of the aqueduct, and there frozen, the spout being above ground. Mr. S. claims no patent for his trap, but thinks it hard to be beat.

FROM AUGUSTA.

[Special Despatch to Whig & Courier.]

THE KNOX COUNTY SHERIFF CASE—HEARING BEFORE THE GOVERNOR—THE CASE REFERRED TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

AUGUSTA, Feb. 25.

Joseph Farwell and G. O. Payson, Esqs., appeared to day before the Governor for the parties in hands in the case of the Knox county Sheriff and Hon C. W. Goddard and D. N. Mortland Esq., for the Sheriff.

Mr. Farwell said the friends of temperance only asked the Sheriff to do his duty and would withdraw their complaint if the Sheriff assured them that this should be done. It appeared that Feb. 11th, certain citizens asked the Sheriff to enforce the law against several places known to the petitioners to be dram shops and that the Sheriff asked the Municipal Judge to make out warrants and since then had not done anything.

Messrs. Goddard and Mortland alleged that every term of Court the Sheriff had prosecuted rum sellers, that after receiving the request should to be intended to proceed and such complaint placed, but finding that the keepers of said rum had obtained knowledge of a proposed prosecution, he suspended action in that matter until ten days hence the March term of Knox County Court for Knox county would be reached, and that the Sheriff enforcement law the Sheriff's discretion between proceeding by complaint and warrant or by furnishing the County Attorney with names of witnesses for purposes of an indictment, and that when the time arrived there would be no reason for complaint.

The consideration of the law was referred to the Attorney General.

WASHINGTON, Feb 25.

SENATE.

Mr. Anthony offered a resolution which was passed that the Committee on Public buildings enquire into the expediency of erecting in the City of Washington the Naval Monument now constructing by Franklin Peixotto.

The bill providing for an Alcoholic Commission was taken up. Mr. Schurz thought the passage of the bill would establish a precedent for Congressional interference in matters belonging exclusively to the States.

After some remarks on the bill by Mr. Schurtz the morning hour having expired, the Chair announced that the bill would be laid over.

Mr Wright asked for the vote. Messrs Bayard and Merrimon desired to submit their views.

Mr Cameron gave notice that he would to-morrow call up the House bill in relation to the Centennial Exhibition.

After some remarks by Messrs. Sargent and Cameron the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill to equalize the distribution of the currency, the pending motion being that of Mr. Buckingham, to recommit the bill to the Finance Committee with the instruction agreed upon directing the Committee to report in favor of increasing the volume of national bank currency to $400,000,000.

A long debate followed on the bill, and without action the Senate went into Executive Session and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE.

Mr Orth of Indiana, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a bill for the issuing and recording of commissions to postmasters appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate. The object was to transfer that duty from the State Department to the Postoffice Department. Passed.

Also a bill to provide for a more complete organization of the State Department; creating two new offices, a third Ass't Secretary of State and a Solicitor to the Department of State, with salaries of $3,500 respectively; and abolishing the office of Examiner of Claims. Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Also a bill to authorize the President to accept for citizens of the United States the jurisdiction of certain tribunals in the Ottoman dominions and Egypt, instead of consular courts, and to accept the recent law of the Ottoman Porte ceding the right of foreigners to hold possessions and transfer real estate in the Ottoman dominions. After an explanation the bill passed.

Mr. E. B Hoar, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a bill to carry into execution the provisions of the 14th amendment to the Constitution concerning citizenship, and defins certain rights of United States citizens in foreign countries, and certain duties of diplomatic and consular officers. The bill not being completely matured was recommitted.

Mr. Bundy, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill to declare the Memphis and Kansas City railroads, military and post roads. Recommitted.

Mr. Bundy reported adversely on the bill to aid of Public Schools in the district of Columbia. Laid on the table.

Mr. Conger, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to amend the steamship passenger act in regard to the publication of the list of emigrants. Passed.

Mr. Smalt of N. H, presented resolution of the New Hampshire Press Association for the restoration of the law allowing weekly papers free transmission through mails in the county of their publication. Also, resolutions declaring hostility to any action that may result directly or indirectly to the restoration of the abuses of the franking privilege.

The House resumed the consideration of the bill to provide for the distribution of public documents printed by the authority of Congress; and of seeds furnished by the Agricultural Department, for free exchange of newspapers between publishers, and for the free transmission of weekly newspapers by mail within the county where published.

A long debate followed, Mr. Butler of Massachusetts being the last speaker, and at the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Packer of Pa., who has charge of the bill, demanded the previous question, refusing to admit any amendments except the substitute offered by Mr. Hale of New York to repeal the law which abolishes the franking privilege.

Further action on the bill went over until to-morrow, and at 4-45 the House took a recess

In the evening the House devoted their attention to the revision of statutes.

FIVE CONVICTS RESCUED!

THE WARDEN OVERPOWERED.

NEWCASTLE, Del., Feb. 25. About one o'clock this morning, Israel Hidings, night warden at the jail in this place, hearing a noise in the yard opened the door, when he was immediately seized by a gang of a dozen men who gagged and handcuffed him, tied his feet, and threw him into a coal hole. One of the gang threatened the warden's life with a knife, but another man, known as "Big Frank," interfered.

A MURDERER RESCUED.

The men got over the wall by two short ladders tied together, which they brought with them, and carried away a prisoner named E. Frazier, who was under a life sentence for the murder of Allison. It is supposed the party reached here in a tug boat, which was seen off Newcastle last night, and has disappeared this morning.

LATER—FOUR MORE CONVICTS RESCUED.

In addition to Frazier, the bank burglars Lawton, Hurlebut, Carter and Hope, each under a sentence of 10 years' imprisonment, were rescued by the gang, which overpowered the warden. The rescuers opened the cells by jackscrews forcing open the windows There were 12 or 15 persons engaged.

A French detective who mixed among the rioters who were driven from Tompkins' Square some time since, both before and after the riot, in his full report to the Chief of Police states that they are saltmost all Communists who advocate the sacking of the houses of the wealthy, and Mr. May, who is their leader, told them the day after the riot that it had been a great success, as it had shown that the workingmen would stand by them even to death, and that their organization was made sacred by blood. AN ATROCIOUS MURDER—A JEALOUS, DRUNKEN POLICEMAN, THE MURDERER.

This afternoon an atrocious murder was perpetrated by a policeman in South Fifth avenue, the murderer being intoxicated. It appears that John Doyle, an officer of the 15th precinct, has been keeping company with Miss Lawler of No. 58 South 5th avenue, for some time. He was insanely jealous, however, and this afternoon getting drunk went to her home and deliberately shot and killed her. The ball entered the right side of the head and it is supposed lodged in the brain. The woman did not speak after the shot was fired. The murderer made no attempt to escape, and was soon arrested.

MICHIGAN.

ADMITTED, THE ICE-FLOES—RESCUE OF A PORTION OF THOSE IN PERIL.

BAY CITY, Feb. 25. The ice which drifted away yesterday morning separated into several sections and drifted in different directions. That which bore the greater number of persons swung to the East shore and all on it, estimated at 300, escaped. About 5 P. M. Arthur Brockman arrived from the scene. He was on the middle field which drifted northeast until it struck the main body of the ice, then stopped from the East shore. This morning Stevenson and a party of seven started for land. They unhitched their horses and attempted to jump from one cake to another, the man driving the sleigh after them. After traveling 5 or 6 miles their hazardous journey was completed. It was supposed on shore that this party had perished.

A PARTY STILL ON THE ICE.

As far as Stevenson knew all the men on the ice were off safely, but a report from the West shore of the Bay says a few men and boats are on board on the ice which is badly broken up between them and the shore. It is useless to attempt their rescue. The two men, Smith and Fenton, in mid channel, are safe. It was at one time supposed that they and many others were drowned, but as far as known, with the exception of those on the West shore, all have escaped.

REPORTED BATTLE IN AFRICA.

A report has reached here that a battle was fought at Commassie between the Ashantees and the force under Gen. Wolseley. The engagement is said to have lasted the whole day and closed with no decided result. The loss of British troops was nearly 300, including many officers. The Highlanders alone are reported to have had 150 men killed. Gen. Wolseley is said to be in need of reinforcements, which were fifteen miles off.

THE GLOBE SAYS

that if this news be true, a greater disaster has befallen the British army, and the course left to Sir Garnet Wolseley is to effect a safe retreat to the coast.

A special despatch to the Standard says the Ashantees entirely surrounded the British army, but were eventually driven of with great loss. The principal War Chief of the Ashantees was killed. The King has taken command of his army in person, and it was expected that he would renew the attack.

THE GHOST THAT JIM SAW.

BY BRET HARTE.

Sonora Pacific Railway.
1873

Why, as to that," said the engineer,
"Ghosts ain't things we are apt to fear,
Spirits don't fool with lovers much,
And third 'ile valves don't take to such,
And as for Jim—
What happened to him
Was one half fact and t other half whim'

Running one night on the line, he saw
A house—so plain as the moral law—
Not by the moonlit bank and thence
Came a drunken man with no more sense
Than to drop on the rail,
First as a thing,
As Jim drove by with the midnight mail

Down went the patents. Steam reversed
Too late for those came a "thud." Jim cursed
As the fireman there in the cab with him,
Kindled stored in the face of Jim,
And says, "What now?"
Says Jim, "What now!
I've just run over a man—that's how"

The fireman stanted at Jim "They ran
Back but they never found house nor man—
Nary a shadow within a mile
Jim stirred pale, but he tried to smile—
Then one'ne tore
Ten mile or more
In quicker time than he'd made afore

What you believe it!—the very next night
Up rose that house in the moonlight white,
Out came the man and drops as before.
Down goes the brakes, and the rest encores—
And so, in fact—
Each night for that
O cursed till fo kes were cracked

Humph! Let me see, it's a year now, most,
That Jim east, and says, 'How's your ghost?
Do you says Jim, and more, it's plain
That's me does 'trouble me again!
I thought I'd shook
That ghost when I took
To the Eastern line—but look

What should I meet the first trip out,
But Queerey bowsthat we talked about
As I myself same man I was, says I, I guess
I'll have to stop this yer foolishness"
So I crammed on steam,
When there came a scream
From my fireman—and it broke my dream—

I reached somebody. Says I, 'Not much,
I've been and run that man I reckon,
And now I'll report Buck we ran
Darn my skin but that was a man
On the rail dead,
Smashed in the head—
Now I call that in earnest' That's all Jim said"

THE OLD CHAPEL MASTER.

BY WALTER THORNBURY.

(Concluded.)

"Karl's success! why, he must succeed.—Come papa supper is ready, and the Cure and Baudelschwaitz will soon be here for the quartette we are to practice"

The family group at the supper table made a picture of Meissonnier. A lettuce, so delicously cool and green, was ready in the bowl, and it was pleasant to see the epicurean care with which the old Chapel-master mixed the salad. The open piano, the sweet face of Lisa, and the fine Titian-like head of Zadaka were reflected in miniature in the round mirror on the wall. The salad was just ready, and Zadaka was tossing it round with a little cry of triumph, when a violent knock was heard at the door, and in burst the irrepressible Babelschwaitz, his gooseberry eyes staring wildly, his red hair, as usual, in a rebellious tangle. He dragged with him the gentle old Cure, his uncle, who was expostulating, half out of breath, at the rapidity of the entrance.

"Lisa, quchen!" cried Babelschwaitz. "such news! Oh, for a trombone to give it an appropriate music. Heisa for Karl Waldstein! The permission for the opera has come. It's all right, it's all right! Oh, for ten thousand big cannon to announce the wonderful opera of Karl, the great young Karl!"

God be thanked!" said Zadaka.

I sa burst into tears of joy

And I—what had I to do? I was stunned. I sank down and buried my head in my hands Oh if I should fail! 'Remember Zadaka's of fer," whispered a voice. Babelschwaitz' dance I round the room like a madman, then poured out wild cries of triumph from the sufferings piano It was a coronation day for us. But, all of you pay, my soul the ugly voice kept saying

IN THE CAFE APOLLO.

The first private rehearsal of the opera by the students of the Conservatorium was an overwhelming success. There could be little doubt, of victory if the audience was not prejudiced against my youth. Babelschwaitz and his friends had insisted on the Apollo Cafe, to which we both belonged, giving me a subject in the private room of the Cafe Apollo, the great resort of students, and old Faust was to be the chairman of the evening. I think from his manner he was glad that I had refused to do what I deemed dishonorable and had trusted to myself alone. He seemed now to have little doubt of my success, and no trace of melancholy or disappointment lingered about him. His eyes twinkled with kindly humor on the noisy young students, and he appeared to relish their wild tricks their outrageous enthusiasm, and to enjoy their uproarious songs, with absurd chorus, representing the cries of animals.

The supper was over, so were the part songs that accompanied each toast, and we were all pleasantly cheered with wine, without one glass too much having yet been taken. Babelschwaitz, on the shoulders of a tall Swabian, both hidden under the same sheet was playing the Ghost in "Hamlet," and answering through a speaking trumpet the questions of a Danish Prince, which went all in the most ghastliest sense.

Mulberry of laughter were rolling through the room, while an impromptu clarionet band played in accompaniment to the extravagant duet. The old Cure was, after great pressing, just pouring out the third glass of hock (a most Sardanapalian act of revelry in him), and we were now preparing for an impromptu incantation scene from "Der Freischutz," Babelschwaitz as Zamiel, when the door opened, and Steiger and a stranger came in, and took their places, without greeting any one near the door.

Steiger was never a pleasant sort of person, and he looked peculiarly disagreeable on this special night. He was a ferrety faced malevolent man, who always seemed as if he were going to bite you—his eyes like a rat's, his forehead low, his complexion yellow with bile, his dress sordid and careless, his walk a distorted twist, his hands like claws, his hair like dead moss, altogether a man to avoid. The person with him was a tall, very French Jew man, with a long face and a squint. Envy and malevolence—they might have stood for types of those passions, and their eyes seemed to cast a baleful influence as they passed round the table, provoking from every one subdued expressions of dislike, anger and contempt.

"Steiger, old fellow," said Babelschwaitz, in a lull of the mad merriment, "you don't look well, lost your voice, quarreled with your tailor, or what is the matter? Pass him the bottle, Klopfenheim"

"Herr Steiger," said Zadaka, rising with dignity and true courtesy, "the Apollo Club drinks to you. Gentlemen, I propose the health of Herr Steiger, the accomplished author of the 'First Studies for the Harpsichord'"

The toast was drunk with tremendous "vivas" and clashes of instruments, but Herr Steiger did not rise to reply. When the clamors for Steiger actually grew violent, he rose slowly, and with a malignant glance at Zadaka.

"Gentlemen of the Apollo Club," he said, "I am surprised to find to-night, on the festival in honor of our young genius or our young failure of the future, a non-member. I have been before now accused of utilizing slanders against this man; of trying, it was implied, to lower the reputation of a rival. I had my own reasons for those accusations and that dislike. I have found from the friend from Vienna who has since bends me, that this man goes by an assumed name. His real name he conceals, and why?—because it has been disgraced.?

Zadaka seemed going to rush at his enemy, but I and Babelschwaitz restrained and consoled him.

"Yes, I say disgraced, and when I tell you his infamous name, you will know that he is the incomparable villain who was everywhere believed in Vienna to have poisoned his friend—the divine Mozart—to conceal his thefts from him That man, Antonio Salieri, sits there before you."

My blood turned icy with horror. I had heard of such a report as one generally believed in Vienna; but even if it was true, how could Zadaka be Salieri? I had never even heard him mention Vienna. He had always spoken of Mozart with a love that bordered on idolatry, and a regret that was almost overwhelming. I hinged him to rise and deny this disgraceful calumny, and I, with my own hands, would expel and challenge this slanderer.

To my horror Zadaka stood up, but he regarded me with vacant eyes, and uttered only incoherent words. He pointed to the closed door, and said,—

"Who is that man in black, with the face turned from us, who is entering the door? He asks for me; he turns his face!—It is Wolfgang! Wolfgang, do not repulse me! I am guilty. It is I—I, thy friend Franz"—

As he said these terrible words, the old man staggered a step forward with hands upraised, and then fell heavily on the floor, as we all thought dead.

"See now," said Steiger, "if I calumniated the man. Karl Waldstein, you were well saved from such a father-in-law."

IV. THE REQUIEM.

It was two days after the great triumph of my opera, the news of which had been the first sounds that broke on the ear of the old man, whose consciousness after his fit at the Cafe Apollo had but slowly returned. I was sitting with him one bright evening, soon after his return to reason, and Lisa, dear Lisa, to whom I was soon to be married, was gone to the Cure to ask him to come and read to her father some prayers of the Church, when he awoke, and seeing me, sat up, and begged me to come nearer to him. I came and sat by the bed, holding his thin white hands

"Ah, my son, my dear son!" he said, "you did right to rebuke my sin by refusing my request about your opera. You could not tell me you love Lisa, for you still love apostate graced wretch like me Ah, you have a good heart, and Heaven will make up to you A—though, for all you know, I may be, as perhaps all Ratisbon now thinks me, the murderer of Mozart, yet still you watch and guard me with a faithful love, and all because I am the father of Lisa

"Not for that alone," I said

"No, you are grateful to me for what I taught you. Alas! what can talent teach genius? But I am no murderer, so you need not shudder when I touch you. My great sin was one of ambition, and its fruit fell on me and crushed me into poverty and obscurity. My time on earth is but short, hear me tell the tale briefly. I and Mozart were fellow-students and dear friends At one time I surpassed him on the harpsichord, and even gained a prize for which he failed A year later he flew past me in the race, and I grew envious Still keeping his friendship, I raised secret intrigues to drive him from Vienna, where I dreaded his rivalry I quibbled his life, I helped to shorten it I ran amid tions, and despair made me long for his death. At last his heart ceased to beat with its full activity. I saw him grow hectic, in his eyes came a strange unnatural fire I feared, yet I rejoiced I urged him to fresh studies, to more toil, to more passionate outbursts of his art, feeling that he was doomed to early death, and deceiving myself with the thought, inspired by Satan, that a few years more would raise me to fame When overpowered with fatigue, I urged him to more exertion, unconscious almost of my own business. I see now my great wickedness, and how near to murder the devil led me. At last that fiery soul outwore its fragile tenement of clay. His sank, and in almost his last hours he gave me the fatal gift of two unfinished operas, the works of his youth. Again I was tempted, and fell. I set up openly, as an imitator of my dead friend, and wove into my opera the airs which I had stolen and completed. My success at first was great And I, too, soon Steiger of those days, jealous of me, reported that I had MSS of Mozart. Duplicates of the airs I had used were found at Magdeburg and my secret was discovered. Then came that terrible rumor, and I changed my name and fled —Ah, do not despise me, lieber Karl I have sinned deeply, but I have repented deeply You have not suffered the temptation that I have underwent You were not a man of talent and ambition crushed by a genius whom you had once surpassed—you know not the bitterness of that. From the moment I stole those thoughts of Mozart's, if I had written the music they sang in heaven, I could never have raised myself to fame I the devil tempted me, he paid me, as he always pays his victims, in base moneys that will not pass Ah, my son! How I have suffered! How can I wish to live now but for you and Lisa? Where is Lisa?"

"She is gone to the Cure's, she will soon return, dear father"

"Say that again. Yes, I have been a father to you, and have loved you as one. You will not forsake me? You will not let Steiger come here to insult a dying man?"

"If the beast comes in here, he shall go out by that window"

The old man was too feeble to speak, but he pressed my hand in gratitude

"I see Lisa and the good old Cure coming up the street She has given him her arm How beautiful she looks"

"Thank God that I shall see her before I die! I feel a strange increasing weight at my heart. I feel through the darkness for the outstretched hand of God"

As I watched the now exhausted man, Lisa and the Cure entered We knelt in prayer around the bed of the old chapel master, and as we rose he blessed us, embraced us one by one.

"Lisa, my darling, he said feebly, 'go into the inner room and play me the 'Requiem' of Mozart It breathes the very soul of Christian hope, and I read in it assurances of forgiveness and of peace Weep not for me Lisa, I am happy now. The giant has been lifted like the mid stone from my heart I am at peace now. Karl, and he joined our hands, 'lead her to the inner room. I would hear some last strains of the music that I have loved so long The Cure will pray with me here."

Lisa was still weeping, I kissed her and sat down myself at the piano, and then arose like an emanation the glorious music that the dying composer wrote for his own interment. Strange muffled processions full of despair seemed to pace past me through a world full of suffering and sorrow. Every variety of human grief the poet-thinker had embodied in those awful wails, broken by loud wailings and passionate outbursts of grief, but by degrees the music melted into light, and there diffused itself throughout the Requiem glimpses of ineffable brightness—Through the open doors of the tomb we saw the widening glory of the heaven where tears are wiped away from every eye. I had paused for a moment in the sudden relapse of grief, when a surpressed cry and a low call from the Cure aroused both me and Lisa

We hurried, and found the Cure striving in vain to keep the old man in bed He seemed wandering His eyes were anxious but joyful in expression, he was stretching out his arms toward the door

"Do you not see him?" he cried "There is Wolfgang there Why do you not greet him, Lisa, Karl Leinhart? He is no longer in funeral clothes, his face is bright with the glory of heaven, and see, he smiles and holds his hand out to me. Cruel, cruel, not to let me grasp it"

"Dear father," I said, "you only dream there is no one there. See, I will open the door"

I opened the door, and the evening sun from the garden burst in as if a god had entered. As it deluged the room, the great flood of holy brightness fell full across the bed of the dying man.

"Yes, there he passes away into the light, smiling and beckoning to me. I am forgiven then. The journey of the bright city has begun Farewell, Lisa, core of my heart! Farewell, lieber, lieber Karl, Heaven bless and guide you as it ever has done! Farewell, dear brother! Wolfgang, dear Wolfgang, I follow!"

Then the head sank, a change passed over the face. It was the shadow of the wings of the Angel of Death. The old Chapel-master lay dead in the soft evening light, and in the full glory of the sunset we knelt round the bed and prayed for the passing soul

ART DEPARTMENT, 1874.

The illustrations of THE ALDINE have won a world wide reputation and in the art centres of Europe it is an admitted fact that its wood engravings are of the highest perfection ever attained The common prejudice in favor of "steel plates" is rapidly yielding to a more educated and discriminating taste which recognizes in the finer work executed on tinted paper a quality with greater facility of production The wood-cuts of THE ALDINE possess all the delicacy and elaborate finish of the most highly wrought steel plate, while they afford a better picture of the artist s original.

To fully realize the wonderful work which THE ALDINE is doing for the cause of art, it is only necessary to consider the cost to the people of any other decent representations of the product one of great pictures

Introducing to delight by The members of the National Academy, and other noted American artists, THE ALDINE will reproduce examples of the best foreign masters, selected with a view to the highest artistic merit and great general interest. Thus the subscriber to THE ALDINE will, at a trifling cost enjoy in his own home the pleasures and refining influences of the art treasure

Its quarterly tinted plates for 1874 will be by Thomas Moran and J. D. Woodward

The Christmas issue for 1874 will contain special designs engravings to be executed by our best artists, and upon reading this notice you will surprise intending subscribers many of its proud successors

PREMIUM FOR 1874.

Every subscriber to THE ALDINE for the year 1874 will receive a pair of chromos The original pictures were painted in oil for the proprietors of THE ALDINE, by Thomas Moran, whose great Colorado picture was purchased by Congress for the National Gallery at a cost of $10,000. The subjects were chosen to represent The East" and The West" (One is a view in the White Mountains, New Hampshire the other in the Rocky Mountains, Wyoming) Both are among the choicest in the nature of the scenes there selected, as a pair, for contrast, and affords a good display of the artist's range. No duplicates of the originals for presentation will be given Every example of American landscape painter to the subscribers of THE ALDINE was in addition peculiarly happy in each and its successful reproduction is attested by the following testimonial, over the signature of Mr. Moran himself

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 10th, 1873.

MESSRS. JAMES SUTTON & CO.

Gentlemen—I am delighted with the proofs in color of your chromos They are wonderfully successful representations by mechanical process of the original paintings.

Very respectfully
(Signed,) THOS MORAN,

These chromos are in every sense American They are by no original American process, with material that can be obtained in this country, and are executed entirely by an American printer, and presented to us as rivers to the first and only chromos American artists have ever produced. No foreign chromo can certainly possess an interest no foreign production can surpass, and neither are they any the worse if by reason of peculiar facilities of production they have the public pays only a trifle, while equal in every respect to other chromos that are sold singly for double the subscription price of THE ALDINE. Persons who have paid a large price for Engravings will be quick to see the superior merit of the Pictures which we furnish to subscribers, and will appreciate the enterprise that renders their distribution possible.

If any subscriber should indicate a preference for a figure subject, the publishers will send Thoughts of Home" a new and beautiful chromo, 14x20 inches in size, representing a little Italian boy, whose speaking eye betray the longings of his heart.

TERMS.

$5 per annum, in advance with Oil Chromos free

For 50 cents extra, the chromos will be sent, mounted, varnished, and prepaid by mail.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtained only by subscription There will be no discount to clubs, nor will a single number be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON & Co.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 1, 1873

Dr. F. W Kinsman, Augusta, Maine

Two years ago last September I took a severe cold, with sore throat for some days, the cold finally settled in the lungs, the cough very painful. I used various kinds of syrups recommended by friends who had noticed my condition, but with no relief My physician prescribed Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, but after three quarts of the oil, and nothing really relieved me I commenced taking Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, of which I took several bottles, Miller's Expectorant and Brown's Bronchial Troches, four or five other remedies, continually growing weaker, losing my appetite, and almost giving up all hope of any relief In fact I was marked by my family, and almost every person that I met as sure to die

But to a change took place One day last winter a circular was thrown in my office, which advertised Adamson's Botanic Balsam, I think Cash, I read that circular very carefully, put on my coat and went for it. I at last found it and began taking it regularly and as per directions. Before I had used half a bottle I noticed a change I then purchased six bottles, and meaning business, went through four of them, continually growing better, resting all night, cough entirely gone, and to-day I can do for three months in one hour as I could in one day eight months ago I am also gaining in flesh, and generally speaking, feel good all over That all is owing to Adamson's Balsam

I most highly recommend it to everybody similarly afflicted, and can this day give you the name and address of at least fifty persons who have been cured out of coughs and colds by its use. I also urged a friend of mine who is in business near me, to add this article to the stock, this did so and sold quite a number in less than a fortnight, and I have not heard of any one yet dissatisfied

I would as soon think of having property uninsured, as that I was to try to keep house without a good supply of Adamson's Balsam in my closet.

With assurance of my highest regard, I am gratefully yours, &c

EMERY COOK.
